May Be Proof of Volcanic Past

Astronauts Find Orange Moon Soil

By Stuart Auerbach

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Dec. 13 (WP) —The Apollo-17 astro-nants last night found a circle of orange dirt in the lunar soil, which the team's geologist, Harrisoo H. (Jack) Schmitt, called the first concrete evidence that the moon has a volcanic history.

"I think you might have to consider that this is a volcanic vent," Mr. Schmitt said. after he and Capt. Eugene A. Cernan had found the yard-wide circle of crange soil on the rim of Shorty

-If there was ever anything that looked like a fumarole (a roleanic vent), this is it," he said. Today, awakened by the an-them of Texas A & M University, the two astronauts reported they were in good shape and began their third excursion on the moon's Taurus-Littrow Valley.

Their final lunar outing will take them to the Wrinkled Hills, at the base of the North Massif

Although most scientists now agree that the moon had a violent volcanic past, none of the five previous American lunar landings has returned with any clear-cut evidence.

This landing site, however, was picked because Apollo-15 astro-naut Al Worden said he spotted volcanic cinder cones while circling 70 miles above the moon, Parouk el-Baz, a NASA hunar geologist, said: "It appears that Shorty Crater is a cinder cone."

Mr. Schmitt appeared to agree. "If I ever saw a classic alternation halo around a volcanic crater, this is it." he said from the rim of Shorty.

He and Capt. Cernan discovered the orange soil as they were digging a trench for a soft sample. "Crazy," said Mr. Schmitt. "It's orange; there's orange soil on the moon, it's really orange. It's heen oxidized. It looks like an nxidized desert soil." Robin Brett, a geologist at the Manned Spacecraft Center, explained that rust-oxidation-is one way to get an orange soil. And one way to get rust, he continued, is through volcanic activity-the last gaseous gasps of roleanism." Mr. El-Baz went even further than Mr. Brett. He suggested that the rust could have been formed perhaps a billion years ago by the escape of water vapor steam-from inside the moon.

"This is the first time," said Mr. Kl-Baz, "that we have seen hydrous matter in any great quantity on the moon." Small quantities of rust have been found in lunar soil returned from earlier missions, but none has been as large a sample as Mr. Schmitt and Capt. Cernan may have found another rust patch while taking a core tube sample at Shorty Crater.

"Even the core tube is red."

said Mr. Schmitt. "The bottom is black and the top is red." The crater was picked as sample stop on the off-chance that it might be a cinder cone. But even Mr. El-Esz, who fought to have this site for man's last moon landing in the decade because of the possibility of finding evidence of volcanism, didn't think that Capt. Cernan and Mr. Schmitt would be able to sample an actual volcanic vent,

U.S. Aide Leaves to Brief Nixon

By Jnnathan C. Randal

PARIS, Dec. 13 (WP).—Henry A. Kissinger flew back to Washington tonight without announcing a definitive cease-fire agree-ment at what once was billed as the "final" round of secret negotiations with North Vietnam. Mr. Kissinger is expected to brief President Nixon tomorrow morn-

Seven weeks after proclaiming that "peace is at hand." Mr. Kis-singer issued an ambiguous departure atatement which confirmed the end of the current toplevel secret talks and set no date for their resumption.

Mr. Kissinger, in an apparently optimistic mood, told newsmen at Orly airport that he and his Hanoi counterpart, Le Duc Tho, "will remain in contact through messages and we will then decide whether another meeting is necessary and when."

But a North Vietnamese newsman at the airport said : "Things do not look too good."

In the absence of immediate official North Vietnamese reaction here, this laconic remark was yet another indication that to-day's six-and-one-quarter - hour session between Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Tho had failed to remove still important substantive ob-

If only to maintain a thread of contact, William J. Porter, ambassador to the formal peace talks, and his North Vietnamese counterpart, will continue to hold periodic "technical" meetings to out details of a revised cease-fire agreement, the White House and Mr. Kissinger announced. Helping Mr. Porter will be William H. Sullivan, assistant secre-tary of state for Southeast Asian affairs, and John Negroponte and other members of Mr. Kissinger's National Security Council staff. American sources suggested that they would not confer until after tomorrow's weekly session of the formal talks. That meeting may provide clues about the "final" secret negotiations, which except for a nine-day breakhave taken place almost daily since Nov. 20 in an effort in revise the original draft cease-fire accord worked out in October. Complicating analysis of the ambiguous American statements today was the fact that Amer-before any triumphant trimpeting took place, Mr. Kissinger would have to brief the President, then very probably fly to Saigon to see South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and extract his reluctant acquiescence to any revised draft. Thus the beauty of statements

There have been reports from London that British Prime Minister Edward Heath will confer with Mr. Nixon, probably in the United States, at an early date to discuss problems arising from Britain's forthcoming entry into the Common Market.

The OECD report mentioned

no European city that had re-sorted to gasoline rationing. But it cited adoption of traffic curbs going well beyond anything in the United States. Among the cities listed:

• Vienna ordered a 10:30 a.m. 7 p.m. buses-only zone in the inner city in November, 1971. Deliveries by truck were allowed from 7 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Air pollution levels were reduced 61 percent in the zone during the workday. An expanded carfree area is planned.

• London plans to close a halfmile stretch of Oxford Street, a busy shopping thoroughfare, to all traffic except buses and taxis.

· Goetchorg, Sweden, and Bremeo, West Germany, allow only trolley cars and buses to cross the downtown area. All other traffic must use a "ring road," leaving and entering specific downtown precincts by special roules. In Goeteborg, downtown traffic was cut by 17 percent; carbon-moooxide levels were lowered in places by 80 percent. Marselles tested a total ban the 1970 Clean Air Act. Remedies on downtown parking in October, under discussion range from 1971, although traffic was allowed to move freely. Carboncent, presumably because fewer cars were attracted to the downtown area, Paris was not included in the report.

• Rome intends to create five "pedestrian islands," linked by a network of vehicle-free streets, in downtown areas. Despite these trends, the OECD study said, local conditions vary enormously. In London and New York, "downtown" is so big as to make total exclusion of vehicles unfeasible; buses and taxis are required. Staggered work hours (practiced in Washington) have been adopted by 2,000 firms in West Germany, but a 1,500-company car pool campaign failed last year in Los Angeles.

The OECD study noted that both the overall measurement of air pollution and the health effects of automobile pollutants as yet "are not well under-stood." Emission control and testing standards vary among Western countries, putting a burden on manufacturers who ex-port cars. Those countries with comparable problems, the study suggested, should agree on common standards.

President Nguyen Van Thieu's call for a Christmas truce and an exchange of prisocers left many South Vietnamese and American officials here with the impression that Mr. Thisu is once more trying to forestall a cease-fire accord he dislikes by offering terms of

But in his rambling and often imprecise speech to the National Assembly, Mr. Thieu did not specifically reject the peace settlement worked out by Hanol and Washington. Some experienced Vietnamese politicians felt they even detected a subtle signal that Mr. Thieu is now ready to accede reluctantly to an agreement he realizes he cannot stop.

Whatever Mr. Thieu meant and there were almost as many interpretations in Saigon as there were listeners—most knowledge-able diplomats feit that in any case the speech would probably have little effect on the secret talks in Paris.

The 55-minute address seemed to be divided into two parts: a tough, hard-line summary of South Vietnam's objections to the draft peace accord, and a con-

But given the increasing indications of remaining major ob-stacles, the statements' wording could also he interpreted as meaning that further secret sessions would be required to break the deadlock.

Moreover, the American state-ments also suggested that Mr. The would stay in Paris rather than return to Hanoi.

During the nine-day suspension betweeen Nov. 25 and Dec. 4. Mr. The remained here. But on that occasion, both sides announced the duration of the suspension, unlike today's unilateral American declarations.

Lending credence to the pes-simistic interpretation of the American announcements was confirmation from a very well informed European diplomatic source that few, if any, of the substantive issues had been solved. Although he also confirmed that "a great deal of progress" has been made on technical mat-ters, he said: "We are in the presence of a treaty full of brackets." In diplomatic drafting, brackets are used to indicate alternative language which has yet to be accepted.

He also suggested that Mr. Kishave to return to Paris to continue his talks with the North Vietnamese.

Because of the news blackout maintained by the North Vietnamese and American delegations on substantive matters, it was not clear why both sides decided to step up the pace of their meetings this week.

Experts' Meeting

Today, for the third straight day, experts conferred on technical matters while Mr. Kissinger and Mr. The discussed substantive matters. The Kissinger-Tho meeting today was preceded by a 90-minute experts' session, which began at 9 a.m. in the home of American jeweler Arnaud Clerc in the fashionable western suburb of Neuilly.

believed to be for domestic con-sumption, while the offer of a truce, to begin before Christmas and extend to New Year's, with the possibility of being continued indefinitely, was designed to show Americans that Mr. Thieu is not the obstacle to peace.

Significantly, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry had prepared an English translation of only the conciliatory section.

"To show its utmost goodwill," Mr. Thieu said, "the Republic of Vietnam will unilaterally release 1,015 North Vietnamese disabled and healthy prisoners of war on the first day of the truce."

To help secure the release of American prisoners, he added, Saigon would be willing to free all North Vietnamese military prisoners if Hanoi responded. He made no mention of political prisoners, whose release the Communists have been demanding.

Along with the truce and the exchange of military prisoners, Mr. Thieu called for "consultations to discuss every problem of mutual concern" between Salgon, Hanoi and the National Libera-

Elsewhere in his speech, how-ever, Mr. Thieu did insist on troop withdrawal. Others here felt Mr. Thieu's offer was Irrelevant, coming as it did after most major points had apparently already been agreed on in Paris. They viewed the proposal as only an attempt to sidetrack the current negotiations.

PARIS, Dec. 13 (IHT).—Mr. Thien reportedly has told mem-bers of the Saigon government that cease-fire details have already been settled and that the United States will sign the accord in spite of Salgon.

Historians may one day note that the Vietnam peace talks really got cooking when the negotiating teams got the store at Arnaud Clerc's to work.

Mr. Clerc is the American jeweler who was called upon by the U.S. Embassy to lend his house for the talks. He, his family and his staff moved out but he "was hours on the phone explaining to the new staff how

"The delegations brought in cold plates." he said, "then changed their minds and wanted warm food. It took them days before they understood how to work my oven."

The white marble, two-story house, which is furnished with English entiques, was built by Mr. Clerc's father in 1936. It has a series of saions, including a big one where the talks were held. The big salon is decorated with a huge 17th-century tapestry depicting Moses watching the Jews crossing the Red Sea.

"There is a big conference table in that room." Mr. Clerc said. "which could double up as a duning-room table. As I was not sure whether the two delegations would want to eat together. I added another table in the next and smaller salon. In the end,

Another person who is also quite happy is Mr. Peretti, who is also the mayor of Neuilly. "Now the whole world will know about Neuilly," he said.

Meanwhile, in Saigon an ammunition dump exploded about seven miles southeast of the capital, military officials reported. A continuing series of blasts Intelligence reports indicated uncertainty whether the fresh North Vietnamese troops and tanks were destined for the Plaine des Jarres in Laos or for South Vietnamese battlefields.

Compiled from contributions by more than 100 scientists, it is to belp health officials throughout the world in their effort to check "serious and sometimes irreversible damage to life on this planet," the preface $8.9%.

The 370-page book ranges from widely familiar air and water pollutants to the "yusho" oil disease which first affected about 1,000 Japanese in 1968 and is induced by the ingestion of "PCB," used in plasticizers and other commercial products.

An early warning system on environmental hazards is described as the immediate practical goal of the World Health Organization. Eventually, this is to be developed into a comprehensive network linking all countries of the world.

The book includes a detailed list of toxic effects produced by score of metals and other chemical substances accumulated in the bodies of human consumers or animals.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 13 (AP).— King Baudouin toolay asked Eximond Leburton, co-chairman of the Socialist party, to try to form a new Belgian government. Mr. Leburton delayed formal acceptance or rejection of the invitation.

The Christian Democrat-Socialist coalition government of Premier Gaston Eyskens resigned three weeks ago over a disagreement on the language problems which deeply divide the country.

Former public works minister Joseph de Saeger, a Christian Democrat, tried vainly for 18 days to form a government. The problem is to get the two-thirds parliamentary majority needed to pass constitutional reforms for more autonomous language areas.

Before the boycott decision, Mr. Jenkins argued that British participation would strengthen the European parliament.

"We ought to be very careful about setting off on a course we cannot hold." Mr. Jenkins said. Let there be no doubt about the deep dismay our nonparticipation will provoke among European Socialist parties. They have made this quite clear."

Free Contraceptives, Advice Are Offered

LONDON, Dec. 13 (NYT) .-Britain is to extend family-planning services to include free contraceptives for all "with special social or financial needs."

This was announced in the House of Commons last night by Sir Keith Joseph, secretary for social services. The cost over the first four years of the plan, he said, will be an additional 520

The total annual cost of this country's National Health Service is about £2.14 billion

When fully operational, the family-planning service will cost the taxpayer 2125 million a year. Sir Keith explained that the "social need" category will cover persons who, unless contraceptives and advice on family planning are provided free, "would other-wise be unlikely to undertake effective contraception." The local physician would make the decition to provide or withhold familyplanning aids.

Unemployed persons and those who receive state benefits to sup-plement their low incomes will be entitled to free contraceptives, as will women who have had a baby or an abortion within the preceding 12 months.

Expert advice will be available free to all under a project to extend the range of present familyplanning services. More clinics and special training courses for professional workers are to be made available

The government's aim, Sir Keith said, is "fewer abortions and much less of the unhappiness and ill-health which result from unplanned pregnancies."

A Japan Air Lines DC-8 landed on the same 3,750-foot strip Sept. 24, overshot the runway and stopped a few fest from a highway. The owners left the damaged airliner on the runway and are trying to sell it. They do not intend to try to salvage it.

Third Mistake

It was the third mistaken landing at Juhu, which is almost a mile from Santa Cruz.

A British Overseas Airways Corp. Comet landed there in 1953 in another incident attributed to pilot error. All aboard that aircraft also survived.

The Indian government radio said the East German aircraft landed "almost on top of the JAL plane, but the pilot veered in time and missed it.

The nose wheel of the aircraft left the runway and became mired in mud. The wheet was damaged, apparently the only

Reds in France No Longer Party Of Raised Fist

PARIS, Dec. 13 (Reuters) .-Communist party leader Georges Marcheis, looking hopefully toyear, today called for a "democratic spring" in France to bring the country toward socialism.

In a three-hour speech opening a major party congress here, Mr. Marchais adopted a moderate tone, insisting the Communists want to cooperate with the rest of the French left and not

"We are not the party of the raised fist, we are the party that is holding out its hand to the people of France," he told the 1,200 delegates at the congress in a suburban sports arena.

Mr. Marchais's speech accentuated the recent softening of the public stance taken by his party as it moves into the electoral battle in a united front with the Socialist and left-wing Mendes Not Running Radical parties.

The electoral hopes of the left have been boosted by recent public-opinion polls showing them leading the Gaullists in voter preferences for the first round of voting in the National Assembly elections to be held next February or March.

Police Drive Saps Strength Of Soviet Dissident Movemen

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Dec. 13 (NYT).--As the Soviet Union has moved to-ward improved relations with the West this year, its searst police have mounted a determined campaign of repression against the domestic dissident movement that han left some dissenters feeling weaker, more vulnerable and more on the defensive than at any time since the mid-1960s,

Since the year began, dissident sources report, more than 100 persons have been arrested in the Ukrainian Republic as part of a crackdown against nationalist activities there, and at least a dosen have been given soulences of 2 to 15 years on charges of anti-Soviet activity.

Eight hey activities in Mosco and other major cities have been arrested or tried in a year-old campaign to suppress the Chronicle of Current Brents, the most important dissident publication. Since April, 1988, the publication has recorded activities of dissenters, the courts, the socret police and Soviet censors as they affect the rights campaign berg. Some other key activists, ar-

76 Votes for Terror

prise, that collectively the United Nations does not accept that terror is a legitimate and urgent matter for international action. Rather, some 76 members—those which voted Monday simply to study the causes of terror-sanction the view that torror is a legitimate instrument of national policy. Many Arabs view terror as a suitable weapon for use against Israel, many black Africans view it as a sultable weapon against minority white African governments; their various patrons go along. Instead of condemning the practice of moving along the several legal evennes towards control of it, the 76 voted in effect for terror. The United States was among 34 states in opposition: 16 abstained. * * *

The initial impulse of some people of good will is to conclude that the United Nations has again, "failed" or been dishenered. This is a misleading judgment. In matters of this sort, the UN cannot transcend the will of its majority. To ask for more is to hold the world body to an impossible standard. In a certain strictly limited sense, terror in its many contemporary aspects is like, say, the multinational corporation: It is a new international phenomenon, brought into being hy new forces and new technology; and it is difficult iegally as well as physically to get a handle on simply because it is beyond the sovereign roach of any one nation. Instead of blaming the UN for not solving at one crack this extremely complex problem, people ought to saluto the UN for having the institutional courage to try tackling it. Mr. Waldheim, the new socretary-general, is owed a special bow: it was on his initiative that the General Assembly seized the nottle.

If the American-led effort to shape legal forms within which to combat terror has been rebuffed, then that does not mean tho final barrier to unbridled savagery has been removed. On the contrary, the political way

It turns out, to no realistic observer's sur- is now clear for individual nations to intensify counter measures of their own. All states, of course—the Soviet Union and Egypt which voted "for" terror, the United States and Israel which voted "against"-already have taken various steps. But by the decision of the 76 to strike terrorism from the international agenda, all states have been put on notice that they must, as Britain's man put it, 'redouble our own national offort." States must "act on their own or cooperate regionally," Israel's representative

> Whether anyone likes it or not, this is what is already happening; it is a tendency which gains not only in necessity but in a certain respectability from the vote at the UN. The terrorists do not observe the common rules of respect for national covereignty and human rights. Ask, for instance, those who fired into the New York apartment of a Soviet diplomat whose children were at play there. They cannot expect to be treated in rospect

> Does this mean more violence is to be expected? In the short run at least, probably yes. A few Palestinians will keep sendingand, no doubt, recoiving-letter bombs. African "liberation" movements will do what they can in white-run Africa, aided, by the way, by funds from the World Council of Churches. It is a grim and frightening prospect and a good number of innocents are likely to be the victims, some chosen as victims precisely for their innocence. States or groups which are victims of terror now know for sure, if they did not know before, that their first line of defense against terror must be self-defense and that the international community, though it may continue to tuttut, has forfeited standing to condemn counter-terror conducted in the name of self-

Pentagon Complexes

Since the formation of the Department reforms were starting to take hold. A bill for of Defense in 1949—for that matter, since the establishment of the War Office in 1781earnest offorts have been directed at finding the optimum mix of civilian and military responsibilities in promoting American national security.

The pendulum swings between the two interests have been predictably cyclical. Fresh upon President Eisenhower's warnings of a military-industrial complex, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara brought to his Pentagon the "Wizz Kids," with their civilian concept of systems analysis that injected calculus and logic into the art of war preparednoss. Dissatisfied with the results of that changeover, Melvin R. Laird roturned control over the choice and acquisition of new weapons to the military. He euphemistically labeled it "participatory decision-making." Now Eiliot L. Richardson will try his hand.

Prosident Nixon's second-term Defense Secretary will need all his managerial skill to untangle the interests and motivations that converge on the problem of selecting and acquiring new weapons.

Mr. Laird assaulted the civilian systemsanalysis office head-on in his first days at the Pentagon, decimating the manpower of that office, and transferring most of its functions to the armed services themselves. Tho new process has proved no more effective than Mr. McNamara's in holding weapons costs within a fixed budgetary ceiling. The General Accounting Office has reported that cost overruns of 47 major new woapons systems had reached $29.4 billion. That is just the excess beyond what they were supposed to cost. This figure is $8.5 billion higher than it was in December 1969, when the Laird over $1 billion in excess costs was run up in just three months of this year.

Cost ovorruns form only one part of the weapons acquisition dilemma. As the Senate Armed Services Committee noted earlier this year, "both the services and defense industry must change the way they have done ousiness for the last two decades if effective change is to take place."

Mr. Laird's able doputy for three years, David Packard, made reform of the process his main task in office, and his efforts to control costs and expand acquisition options may yet bear fruit over the long run. Similarly the sweeping recommendations of the blue ribbon Defense panel of 1970 could holp sort out civilian and military responsibilities if ever they were fully implemented.

As it is now, in the words of a Brookings Institution study, the military services havo a structural conflict-of-interest problem: "They identify military requirements, specify the system needed to fulfill them, and then serve as judge and jury over each weapon project.º

As Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Mr.Richardson seemed to yield fairly easily when confronted with White House opposition on major issues-welfare reform, busing, aid to education. This record gives scant hope that ho will turn into much of a fighter against developing sophisticated and costly weapons which both the military and President Nixon seem to want. But he will make a monumental contribution to Pentagon management if he can at least filter military demands through offoctivo civilian evaluation of the process for spending those woapons dollars.

Sino-Soviet Tension

A clash on the Sino-Soviet border-even a minor clash—reminds us that of all the surviving tensions between any two wellarmed countries this is potentially the greatest. Worse, for three years past it has seemed the most irreparable. Hopeful signs aro noted here and there, hands are shaken in Peking, invitations extended in Moscow. Perhaps the border issoe remains insoluble but perhaps that has ceased to be a matter of urgent concern on either side.

But what remains of concern is the fear and the enmity. In 1969 it seemed possible that one or other of the border incidents could burst into a much more dangerous conflagration or that some pre-emptive attack might be under consideration on the Russian side. That no longer seems a possibility. If there are minor incidents both sides seem concerned to play them down.

WASHINGTON - The Congressional Committee which has been studying, at the request of President Harding, the possibility of combining various executive departments, to do away with waste effort and duplication, has recommended the consolidation of the War and Navy Departments into one to be known as the Department of National Defense. Watching Kissinger in Paris

By James Reston

PARIS.—Henry Kissinger has been living during the critical last days of the Vietnam peace talks in the old Rothschild house, now the American Embassy residence, at No. 41 Rue du Paubourg Saint-Honoré, down this glittering street from where President Pompidou of France resides in the Elysée Palace.

On the Faubourg Saint-Honore, all the shops look like Tiffany's on Christmas Eve. Judging by the prices, this must be where inflation was invented, so the few reporters who wait outside for Henry can at least go window-

That's about their only consolation and, considering their salaries, it isn't much. In the Paris peace talks of 1919, Harold Nicolson, the British diplomat. sain there were three ways to deal with the press. The best way, he said, was to tell them nothing, which at least gave them the excitement of a chase. The next best way was to tell them everything, which kept them busy and eventually bored them. And the worst way, he said, was to pretend you were giving them the facts, when you weren't.

Press Told Nothing Kissinger has followed the first course. He has told the press He has left them to judge by his expressions when he came out of the meetings with Le Duc Tho bow things were going. When he seemed pleased, they assumed the negotiations were going well, and when he seemed grim, they assumed things were going badly, and when he read their interpretations in the be switched and looked amiable when he was depressed. and sad when he had made a

So he has come to the end of his negotiations here without seeing the reporters or indicating how his negotiations have come out, but the Vietnamese have talked cautiously to their friends in Paris about the central issue that still remains, and it is an extremely awkward issue.

According to these secondary sources, it is a question of whether tho cease-fire agreement between the United States on the one hand, and North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front on the other, will acknowledge in a few simple unambiguous words that the Saigon government has sovereign right and authority over all the territory of South Vietnam.

Saigon, according to these sources, keeps asking that all North Vietnamese troops be removed from South Vietnam, but insists, even if it cannot negotiate their withdrawal, that the ceasefire agreement make clear that they have no legal right to be there. This is opposed by the National Liberation Front, which hopes to replace the Thieu government in Saigon, and Hanoi has supported the NLF, and though Kissinger has proposed innumerable ways of avoiding co postponing this dilemma, apparently it has not been resolved.

Talks With French

Meanwhile, Kissinger has found time, during the interminable arguments over this central point in the last few days, to talk to the French about the even more serious questions that are developing between the United States and the expanded Common Market countries of Europe. and between the United States and Japan over the critical monetary and trade questions in the

The Europeans are paying little attention to the intricate questions of the Vietnam cease-fire. They assume that these will be settled fairly soon, either with the agreement of Saigon, or in a separate agreement among Washington, Hanol and the National Liberation Front. In fact, the newspapers in Britain and in Europe have given up on trying to analyze Kissinger's facial expressions, and pay little attention to the last phase of the Vietnam and Monnet will be going to Washington late in January to carry on these conversations.

Neglected Problems

So even before these difficult negotiations about Southeast Asia and the past are over, tho administration is beginning to turn to the neglected and larger problems of the world. Kissinger initiated an inquiry into Wash-ington's relations with Europe and Japan last June, during the presidential election, but has been so preoccupied with the Vietnam question ever since that he has not had time to bring the Euro-pean and Japanese questions to the forefront of National Security

Now things are changing. The question of sovereignty over all of South Vietnam remains and either Kissinger or Gen, Haig or somebody else will have to go to Saigon again to try to permade Gen. Thies to sign the cease-fire and avoid a separate peace-but the impression one gets here is that Firm is determined to here the Vietnam cease-fire behind him before he takes the oath of

Resentment Politics in the World

PARIS.—A world-wide swing to the right was proclaimed after Prime Minister Trudeau was set back in Canada's election while President Nixon scored a landslide in the United States. But that superficial judgment is now being unsaid almost daily in news from everywhere.

In West Germany, Willy Brandt ied the Social Democrats to their greatest national victory last month. The Labor party has ended decades of Conservative ruie in Australia.

In Japan, Premier Kakuei Tanaka's Conservative party has held its legislative majority by a sharply reduced majority, with big gains being scored by the in Paris, polls show the conservative Gaullists in trouble, and a distinct possibility that a leftwing union linking Communists and Socialists might win the legislative elections due early in the new year. The latest results, of course, do not announce a world-wide swing to the left. What they indicate is that politics in the advanced countries is going through a new and quirky phase, While the general pattern of the new phase has not yet emerged. certain elements are clear,

For one thing, President Nixon's trips to China and Russia have put a definitive stamp of approval on the politics of détente. The right wing can no longer make effective use of the line that the left is soft on the mortal enemics in Peking and Moscow.

Thus Willy Brandt's policy of accommodation with Communist Eastern Europe gave him a landslide in the West German elections. Labor won in Australia by wirtue of a pledge to recognize Communist China. And even the France are acquiring a certain normality.

Inflation Issue

A second element of the new politics follows from the virtual disappearance of acrious economic depression in the advanced countries. Unemployment, as 2 result, has ceased to be a domi-

Soviet Gas Deal

The Washington Post editorial The Soviet Natural Gas Deal" (IHT, Dec. 5) Illustrates the growing problem between foreign policy objectives and the search for energy that will satisfy future domestic demand (at the lowest possible cost).

It is evident that if such an ment is reached, the benefits will favor the political aspects rather than the economic ones: consider the mere logistics of such a venture. A quick glance at a map indicates problems of terrain, climate, distance and transportation, all of which are nonexistent in such areas as the Persian Gulf, which is presently burning natural gas at a rate of ten billion cubic meters a day!

Thus, it seems that our planners of foreign policy are taking a calculated risk for a new political dynamic in exchange for higher energy costs. MICHAEL HEADLEY.

President Nixon did well oven in such areas of high unemployment as California and Wast. Virginia, Mr. Trudeau made his best showing in the high unemployment area of Quebec. The achievement of full employment in Japan did not help Mr. Tanaka, nor does it seem of much avail for the Gaullists under President

Instead of unemployment, the olg domestic issue is a social dislocation connected with rampant inflation. Throughout the advanced industrial world people equipped-by virtue of real estate. or stock holdings-to take advantage of inflation have enjoyed rapid rise in income and tatur. Persons with fixed incomes or low status jobs have suffered a relative decline. Resentment of those who have done much better has become a dominant political passion if those left behind and the political leaders able to tap that resentment have benefitted accordingly.

That explains in part why President Nixon, an exploiter of resentment par excellence, did so woll compared to the rest of the Republican party. It also explains the actback to Mr. Trudeau a political arriviste himself, who generated resentment in Western Canada because he paid so much attention to Quebec. It also provides another reason for the relatively good showing of the left-wing parties in Japan and France, as they have concentrated on the issue of more equal shares in the general prospertty.

Main Question

My guess is that the issue of equal shares has now become the main question in the politics of the industrialized nations, But I very much doubt, despite all the confident talk of tax reform and guaranteed annual incomes, that any political leader has a good recipe for schieving a better belance in the distribution of wealth.

Not surprisingly, accordingly, the shrewdest leaders prefer the juicy malon of foreign policy to the slim pickings of fairer incomes. Thus President Nitron and Charecton Brandt will probably all continue to emphasize the foreign pality lastes, which brought them victory at the polls over the vering domestic questions. It is a sure sign of the times that President Pom-pidou, faced with falling Gaultist fortunes, has scheduled, just hefore the French elections & visit to Mr. Breenney.

The Prickly But Edible Burdock

INTIL quite recently, burdock meant to me only the unwanted clump of tall bushea growing beside the tool shed on my Vermont farm, which insured ogeny with great cificiency by affixing its burrs tenaciously to my clothing or mingling them inextricably with the fleece of my sheep, thus reducing its value. I tried to get rid of it, unsuccessfully, not knowing then that the way to do it is to cut off the tops of the stalks before the purplish flowers bloom, and then wait three years for the perent plant to die without having been able to reseed itself.

My opinion of burdock was akin to that of William Shakespeare, who described King Lear

Crown'd with rank fumiler and furrow weeds, With burdocks, hemlock, neitles, cuckoo-flowers Darnel, and all the idle weeds

I had no idea then that burdock is (a) an acceptable wild food and (b) a plant of medicinal virtues, for one of which it is conveniently placed, for farms like mine, which was plagued with burdock, are likely also, as was mine, to be harborers of wasps and bees. Burdock poultices re-lieve the pain of their stings and reduce the swelling.
One may acknowledge the virtues of burdock without swallowing whole the assertion made by Olivier de Serres towards the end of the 16th or the beginning of the 17th century: "Its leaf, crushed and applied on persistent ulcers, cures them, and also draws out the venom resulting from the hites of mad dogs. snakes, and other evil heasts." Nor need we take for gospel the report of the irascible 18th-century Dr. John Hill, who wrote in 1758 in his monumental 26-vollume, "The Vegetable System": "I had an attack of gout with fever: took burdock tea in double strength and passed an enormous quantity of gravel; the pain and the fever ended in 24 hours, and a week afterwards I was able to go out." It is true that the actor David Garrick wrote of Hill:

For physic and farces, his equal there scarce is.

His farcee are physic, his physic a force is, but this represented less Garrick's considered opinion of Hill'a competence than a shaft of wit launched at him during the public quarrel which Hill provoked because he had written some plays which Garrick probably accurately, thought not worth producing.

Investigations

More recent medical investigations, though they did not result in recommending burdock for rabies, have borne out some of the folk beliefs in its qualities. Early in the 19th century the French surgeon Baron Pierre François Percy devised an ointment combining sap from crushed burdock leaves with lead oxide, which, spread on gauze and covered with a fresh burdock give a starchy impression; but leaf, was applied with success to running sores; it was this remedy which was discovered to be effective also against insect stings. In 1918 laboratory research established the value of burdock as a diuretic; further experiments in 1935 confirmed this and opened the possibility that it also helped discourage abnormal increases of sugar in the blood, thus giving some support to a long-standing when quite young and fresh. popular theory that burdock is Wild food enthusiasts are not good for diabetes. There is also a theory that burdock calms stomach ulcers. In home medicipe, poullices are made from fresh leaves or fresh roots, while for internal use, decoctions or infusions are brewed from fresh

To lovers of wild foods, burdock offers four possibilities, of which the most tempting is provided by the young shoots of spring, which Alexandre Dumas described as tasting like asparagus. When the plant is a little older, the stalk is edible. It is peeled, boiled in salted water together with the veins of the leaves, and served with vinaigrette salad dressing or a white sauce. It has been de-scribed variously as tasting like cardoons or potatoes, and it does

The third offering of the hurdock is the young leaves, which can be added to salads. Finally, the roots are peeled, sliced into disks, and bolled, but they are only palatable ne parts of Scotland the plant is an accepted Item on the menu. Besides using the spring leaves in salads, Scots treat the young shoots and the roots like salsify. The hurdock country par excellence, however, is Japan. There it is carefully cultivaled othere is some cultivated burdock in Hawoii too, raised by Japanese) and as a result of this care the root is not misshapen, thick, knobby and fibrous, as it may be in the wild plant, but long, thin, smooth and refined, in appearance and in taste. Although the Japanese also use the stalks and the young leaves, which have more flavor than those of the wild plant (one Japanese dish, for example, consists of chopped fresh burdock leaves as a stuffing for cylinders of eel), the root is for them the most important part of the plant. It is called gobo, and is used as an all-purpose seasoner to enhance the finver of many dishes. It is often present in sukiyaki, LONDON, Dec. 13 (AP-DJ).— The British wholesale price index for manufactured goods rose 0.75 percent to 149.2 in November from 148.2 in October (1963 equals 100), the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) said today.

The rise was about the same is the monthly average during the preceding three months, despite the fact that November was the month in which the govern-ment imposed a freeze on prices.

Japan to Curb Camera Exports

The Japan Camera Industry Association plans to form a cartel to curb exports. Member firms and other companies are working out each maker's export quota, based on exports in the 12 months ended July 1971. Local trade journals say export cellings under the cartel would he $220 million a year for still cameras, $98 million for cine cameras and $90 million for lenses.

U.K. Firms Buy Dutch Interest

Hambros Bank and Argyle Securities, both of Britain, have acquired a 40 percent interest in Beleggingsmaatschappij in Onroerend Goed de Wereldhaven, a Dutch property investment company. Burnham & Co., of the United States, acquired a 10 percent interest in Wereldhaven in October. Hambros and Argyle have purchased $60,000 shares at 200 guilders a share from directors of Wereldhaven. It is understood that the British firms do not intend to bid for the other 50 percent of the capital.

Japanese Machine Tool Orders

Orders received by 68 leading Japanese machine tool manufacturers in October totaled 13.9 billion yen, down 14 percent from September but up 88 percent from a year earlier. The year-to-year gain was due to increased orders from the acto and general machinery manufacturing industries. Of the total, export orders accounted for 1.39 billion yen, up 4 percent from September and up 231 percent from a year earlier, when machine tool makers were badly hit by the U.S. August 1971 economic policies. Daimler-Benz Sees Unchanged Net

Daimler-Benz expects earnings this year to be about unchanged from 1971, although worldwide sales will climb 8 percent to 13.8 billion deutsche marks from 12.7 billion marks. The company did not make a precise profit forecast. For 1971, after-tax profit was 204 million marks.

Can Venture Set Up in Japan

Nippon Light Metal's previously announced joint venture with National Can Co., of the United States, and four other Japanese concerns has been established. The new concern, callled Nippon National Seikan Co., is capitalized at 300 million yen and is awned 30 percent each by Nippon Metal and National Can Overseas Corp., a sobsidiary of National Can, and 10 percent each by Kawasaki Steel Corp., Nichimen Co., Sanwa Bank and Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank. Plans call for the construction of a 3-billion-yen plant capable of turning out 150 million aluminum heverage cans a year by the end of 1973. Capacity is expected to rise to 300 million cans a year by 1975.

Pound Float Should Continue One Dollar-Into 1973, EEC Bankers Say

The pound's float probably ought to continue well after Britain's entry into the Common Market, on Jan. 1, European authorities have quietly agreed.

Contrary to the once-prevalent assumption that the pound would be returned to a fixed official rate by the time Britain joins the EEC, the current thinking among central bankers is that they would rather wait as long as it takes to sec what a durable parity would be.

No EEC member "will press the British to go back to a fix-ed parity before there is some assurance that they can hold that parity," one monetary expert declares.

Prolonging the rather orderly float of the pound that started last June 23 would be far preferable, other anthorities also explain, to Britam'e setting a rate that must be changed six months or so later in a disruptive wava of speculation.

Major Uncertainty

So, in planning for the startnp about next April of the EEC's own reserve fund for supporting currency rates, the authorities are not counting on immediate British participation. A key uncertainty is the shape of the "phase 2" wage-price controls that presumably will follow the current freeze here.

The freeze, which began Nov. 6, is to run for as long as three to five months, and there is considerable uneasiness about the extent to which often rebellious British labor unions will cooperate in it and especially in subsequent anti-inflation efforts.

The pound has drifted down to about $2.34 lately from the rate around $2.60 prior to the float, and some analysts have been predicting a marked further slide in light of higher wage costs here that threaten to make British goods less competitive.

While British authorities are understandably unhelpful as to when the pound is likely to be repegged, there is support in in-fluential circles here, too, for considerable delay. A key EEC goal is to weld member nations closer together by minimizing fluctuations between their currencies. So if the pound were set at a fixed but shaky rate, aiding it could prove disastrously costly to the European monetary fund, and set back the whole process of economic "integration" the EEC is organizing.

spiraling inflation to low productive investment and stagnant industrial production. Last week's anti-inflationary package, involving sharp cuts in the value-added tax and the flotation of a 5.5-hillion-franc loan hy the government to mop up excess liquidity, is believed to have very little chance of

Given even less chance of success are the "recommendations," and hence the absence of any direct controls, to try and hold down wage increases to 6 percent and price increases to percent next year. These compare with estimated 12 percent and 7 percent rises, respectively, for 1972.

The pre-electoral overtone of the plan, with the government aiming to please everybody, or at least disturb as few groups as possible, is evident, a financial analyst commented. From an economic point of view, the plan is worthless unless the finance minister has invented a new painless method of fighting inflation," he said.

The consensus is that a new eet of stronger measures involving higher taxation and price controls is most likely to be announced after the elections.

Meanwhile, industry leaders are renewing their warnings against the longer-term impact on production of the current low rate of productive investment,

Overall French economic expansion, however, continues to be strong Before presenting his anti-inflationary package, Fi-nance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing noted the high level of activity, adding that France is going through an "accelerated" growth period.

France expects gross national product to rise 5.8 percent in volume this year, up from 5.6 percent forecast only two months ago, and the highest in Europe, be said.

Fund Blocks Said Sold By Firm of Ex-Aide

By Philip Greer

NEW YORK, Dec. 13 (WP) .-One of three brokerage firms which apparently handled the bulk of liquidation of $224 million in stocks from mutual funds managed by IOS, Ltd., has strong personal ties to Rohert L. Vesco, who is charged with masterminding a plot to look the Geneva-based funds. In a civil suit filed on Nov. 27. the Securities and Exchange Commission accused Mr. Vesco, 20 associates and 21 corporations of liquidating the stocks in order to divert the proceeds to shell cor-porations controlled by Mr. Vesco. A federal judge here has pro-hibited further investment by the IOS funds, except in marketable U.S. securities. Mr. Vesco has denied any wrongdoing in the case and said he will fight it through a Vesco assistant until last spring. According to New York Stock Exchange records, Mr. Dodd be-came president and a voting stockholder in the Ross firm on May 18, shortly after the SEC charges that IOS, under Mr. Vesco's direction, began to liquidate the stocks. The SEC suit contends that the liquidations continued into Octo-ber, and Wall Street traders note that blocks of stock were traded through the summer which would be identified as coming from the IOS funds and through Ross, Low. Mr. Vesco is the former chair-man of International Controls Corp. and also former chairman

September, but was restored to the board three weeks later. Before joining Ross, Low, Mr. Dodd was a vice-president of ICC. His resignation was never announced formally. He said in a telephone interview that he left the company "over a year ago" and joined the brokerage firm "full time in late 1971." A proxy statement sent to ICC shareholders before the annual meeting last spring said Mr. Dodd resigned "subsequent to Jan. 28, 1973."

The overall picture in six notrump is that South has 10 sure tricks: three spade three hearts, two dismonds and two clubs. He can try for even breaks in both major suits, keeping the diamonds in reserve, And if one major suit proves favorable, a squeeze may operate. As the cards lie, one would expect six no-trump to succeed.

The contract was reached as shown in the diagram. North's raise of three no-trump to four no-trump was intended to be natural. South decided to respond conventionally, and showed two aces en route to the slam just in case his partner had been serking this information.

West had a lead problem against six no-trump. From his angle any lead might prove help-ful to the declarer. He made an imaginative choice by leading the spade jack. This set a trap for South into which he proceeded to fall.

The first trick was won with the spade queen in dummy, and the club queen was led. West ducked, and the closest hand was en-tered by leading the heart nine to the queen. The club king was played, and now West won with the are and shifted to a diamond.

South won with the king in the dummy, led to the spade acc. cashed the club jack and played his last spade. When West followed, he assumed that the opening lead was from J-10-x-x and finessed. When this lost to East's ten the declarer was down one, and while still in shock he lost another trick unnecessarily for down two.

THE CASE FOR AMERICAN MEDICINE A Realistic Look at Our Health Care System By Harry Schwartz, David McKay Co. 240 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Louis Lasagna

THE debate in America about though he doesn't predict the e its health-care system suffers of maldistribution) and poir from the low quality of discussion. about the key issues. Plagued by both political expediency and semantic traps taken as "health care is a right"), our national leaders often fail to address the problems with either logic or can-

Harry Schwartz, a New York. Times editorial writer, has raised the level of the debate with this new book. Not calculated to pander to critics of our medical system who prefer utopian schemes, it deserves the widest possible reading by all serious students of the problem, Schwartz's thesis is simple: Unit-ed States medicine is not so grievously ill as it is made out to be, and the radical social sur-By Alan Truscott gery proposed as corrective meabe worse than the disease,

Il is not just our leaders who are schizophrenic about medical care; the average citizen also manages to be remarkably ambivalent. Often critical of "greedy" or "unfeeling" doctors, he usually tells polisters that his treatment is good to excellent and his doctors considerate and empathic. "Doctor in the House." The Hospital and Temperature's Rising" satirize the profession on television while "Marrus Welby, M.D." pays impressive

In there a health crists? Schwartz says no. Critics may accuse him of a means-test mentality, Goldwaterism and of exaggerating the hypochondrissis of "the worried well," but his statis-tics on health-care delivery (that pervasive and horrid bit of jazgon) demand attention. Life expectancy in the United States, while not rising at the rate of the 1940s and 1950s, nevertheless is still going up. Infant mortali-ty continues to drop and shows no correlation with the number of physicians in a state. The U.S. infant mortality rate is not the lowest, but is comparable to that of Canada and the United Kingdom, and lower than that of Belgium, West Germany, Crecho-slovakis, Israel and the U.S.S.R.

Is there a doctor shortage? Again, Schwartz says no. Difficulties in finding the right doctor quickly are mainly, he argues, due to maldistribution and maltraining of doctors, not a numerical shortage. We have too many surgeons and not enough primary physicians. Doctors and their families eschew the boondorks and prefer the cultural and scientific blandishments of larger towns and cities. There are over 100 counties in the United States without a single doctor, but every country that allows the physician freedom of choice finds its rural areas underserviced. Coach Allen Accuses Alworth

Cowboys, 'Skins in Blocking Feud

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, Dec. 13 (NYT) .-George Allen, the Washington coach, has complained about the Dallas "crackback" blocks, one of which cost Allen the services of his defensive captain, Jack Pardce, in the Redskin-Cowboy game last Saturday. Lance Alworth, the Dallas wide receiver, made several blocks on the unsuspecting outside linebacker, who was krying to follow the flow of the play. "It's something designed to hurt a player and I don't think it has any place in football," said Allen yesterday. "It's illegal and

Pardee, 36, who came out of the game with a bruised knee but will play on Sunday, said, "That's what comes from the all-righteous Tom Landry who is holier than thou and all good."

Allen and Pardee will elicit no sympathy from coach Landry and the other Cowboys. Their 36-yearold linebacker, Chuck Howley, wound up in the hospital Sundey undergoing knee surgery after having been on the receiving end of a block very nearly a "crack-back," and one that came from his blind side.

"A crackblack block is actually a legal clip which can occur in the zone three yards on either side of the line of scrimmage. What happens is that the blocker, usually a back or flanker, comes out beyond the line of scrimmage and then blocks back usually at a linebacker.

The claim of illegality falls into a gray area. The language in the clipping rule reads, "Doubtful cases involving a side block or the opponent turning his back as the block is being made are to be judged according to whether op-ponent was able to see and ward off blocker.

Alworth said yesterday:
"I'm sorry they (Washington)
can't take a loss like men. The thing that is hurting them more than anything else is pride, and pride goes before a fail.

We won one and they won one. Let's meet again. We hope they make it, because we're going to." Motivated

There usually is a motive behind any Allen pronouncement. Perhaps he is trying to stir up some enmity among his troops towards the Cowboys who could be the Redskins' opponents for the National Conference championship on Dec. 31. Howley, meanwhile, said from his bed et Maylor Memorial Hospital in Dallas that he did not want to think about retirement and that maybe he could play again. But Tex Schramm, the club president, was not encouraging. "I'm afraid this may be it for Chuck," said Schramm. retire his number. We'll have a day for him. He has meant so much to the Cowboy franchise." Lots of Yardage

This season did not come out right for a number of other teams who had been on top before, such as the Jets, the Lions, the Colts and the Chiefs. It is difficult for the athletes to admit collectively that they don't have it anymore. Although the speed and the knowledge may still be there, such intangibles as freshness, recklessness and first-time enthusiasm

This year's playoff candidates reflect the value of these intangibles at a time when most (cams are closely matched physically. The Steelers are an out sanding example, and so are the Packers, estentially a young team with fo effective holdovers from the Vince Lombardi er.c.

The Health Food Boom, French Style

PARIS (IHT).—Two years ago a French weekly did a long article on French eating habits and concluded that the Freoch were unlikely to warm to prepared foods. Should the pressure of modern life force a change in eating habits, the article concluded. "It will be with a discernment worthy of the inheritors of a great civilization of the table."

But that was two years ago. Now convenience foods are selling handily, and while no one is offering the prebasted turkeys that have hit the United States, a boneless, rolled-up and equally nauseat-ing product called rôti de dinde is expected to do nicely here over the holiday season.

This winter a provincial paper headlined: "We aren't eating any longer, we're poisoning ourselves," and last month France-soir described, approvingly, new petrol-based artificial proteins and a systern for mass-producing vitamin-packed

The inevitable reaction, as food becomes more adulterated, has been a minor boom in health food stores and restaurants in Paris. "Penicillin in milk, lead in enamel salad bowls, toxins in meat, mercury in tuna, artificial coloring in petits pois, pesticides in carrots, hormones in escalopes, potassium in radishes—all this hes pushed people toward natural foods," said the weekly Le Nouvel Observateur in a recent article on the macrobiotic boom.

A Critic

Even Le Monde's food critic took up the question of macrobiotics, opening his article with uncharacteristic levity—"to be in one mustn't be Yin"—and concluding that if God had wanted him to be a vegetarian He wouldn't have given him such sharp

Le Nouveau Guide, the lively food and drink magazine edited by Henri Gault and Christian Millau, is preparing a long study of natural and adulterated foods for its March issue. For the moment, like many leading French food experts, Mr. Millau, is skeptical about much of it.

"A macrobiotic diet might be very good if you were really sick," he says. "Bick in the head."

Asked if he would ever consider serving health foods in his Tour d'Argent, Claude Terrail replied simply, "My God!" Pulling himself together briefly, he adds, "What am I supposed to do—raise my glass and drink to the health of my friends with a pill instead of a drink?"

Has Mr. Terrail ever tasted brown rice or ric complet as it is called in French?
"I don't want to think of it. Look, dear. doesn't mean I don't love you but I don't want to talk about it."

Michel Oliver, the more adventurous young patron of the Bistrot de Paris, says he has indeed tasted ris complet: "It was horribly bad, positively hallucinating, he

In Favor

But Mr. Oliver is in favor of health food restaurants. "There's one just behind my place. People go there, then they come to Michel Oliver wants it known he isn't against health: "I drink a glass of grape-fruit juice every morning," he boasts. But he thinks that health foods are a bit of a racket: They say good health has no price, which means there's a very good way for someone to make a profit." Claude Terrail agrees: "People think anything that makes money is good, but that doesn't mean it is." Christian Millan thinks many health foods ere a clever mixture of science and fakery-sold at prices 30-40 percent higher than ordinary foods.

The rage to purify wine is on, too. Ona health food store in Paris serves a peculiarly nasty Bordeaux style wine of its own making while, with happier results, several of the smaller champagne makers have for some time been bottling a wine to which none of the traditional "Liqueur

Steven Spurier, the clever young English wine merchant who runs the Caves de la Madeleine is especially enthusiastic about a new, "organic" champagne called Brut Intégral to which nothing has been added. After disgorging, he explains, most champagnes are topped up according to po-tential market and acidity. The liquent d'expédition that is added is, he says, "other champagne if they are honest, brandy and sugar if they aren't."

Hiding

By sweetening champagne, Mr. Spurr says, you can hide everything that's bad in it. "It's bad for the insides and for the head as well. Feople are allowed to sell really nasty champagnes—you don't know how nasty until your headache next morning," he says.

The advantage in having a champagne to which nothing has been added, says.

Mr. Spurier, is that you have a natural wine. The disadvantage is that the taste takes getting used to: "The public has got used to a rounder taste. If you give it to: someone who doesn't drink champagne he would find it too dry. A connoisseur would find it super," Mr. Spurrier claims.

Mr. Spurrier says that recently in his care he held a tasting in which his Brut Integral and the divine Krug were "The first time round everyone preferred the Krug but at the end all the Brut Integral was gone and there was Krug left over. One glass of Krug is enough— it's like the Chambertin of champagnes with its big round taste—while you can drink Brut Integral all day." -

Candidly, he admits that his Brut Integral hasn't been selling all that well since most people prefer known brands that assure le standing. "I didn't think in terms of having a big market for it but in terms of seeing if it could be done," he says.

In the meantime, the fatted calf is being readied with no thought of what he's been eating or injected with, and holiday glasses filled with exquisite poisons will be raised on high. A votre sante, as they say.
